

Author of novels relating that courage makes ordinary people extraordinary

1

Author's Biography:

When the dot.com bubble burst and she was forced into early retirement, JoAnn Smith Ainsworth reinvented herself from a database administrator and researcher into an author of historical romance and paranormal suspense novels.

Ainsworth's life-long fascination with language and her experiences with her great aunt who cooked on a wood-burning stove gave her the background to start her first historical romance. She kept rewriting until she won third place in the International Outreach writers contest and then began other novels. She has completed four historical romances and one paranormal suspense..

She is a graduate of the University of California, Berkeley (English and Social Science majors) and Fairleigh Dickinson University (M.A.T. English) and has her M.B.A. studies from Pepperdine University.

For more information, see www.joannsmiwhtainsworth.com.